FROM THE HEART OF 3M

Dear Friends, Partners, and Community Members,

I woke to a fall chill in the air, and the smell of cinnamon. The season can feel like a hot cup of cider and a warm hug. November- the season of gratitude.

I am reminded that life is a journey of lessons and blessings. Each hardship teaches us something about endurance and compassion, and every act of kindness becomes a blessing that ripples far beyond what we can see. At Turning Point Domestic Violence Services, we are grateful every day for the lessons learned from survivors' strength—and the blessings found in the compassion of those who stand beside them.

This year has brought tremendous uncertainty for so many in our community. Cuts to SNAP and Medicare have left families struggling to meet their most basic needs, while ICE raids and the fear they bring have made safety even harder to find for immigrant survivors. These challenges compound the trauma already faced by those seeking help, and they remind us just how vital our collective support truly is.

Through it all, I have been deeply moved by the dedication and heart of our staff. Every day, they meet survivors where they are—with patience, empathy, and unwavering belief in their capacity to heal. They not only see the survivor, but also the children whose lives are forever shaped by violence and by the hope that follows. Their work helps families find stability, rebuild trust, and rediscover a sense of safety and belonging.

We also know that much of our impact happens quietly, in moments that often go unseen: a compassionate conversation, a shared tear, a word of encouragement, or a gesture of kindness that feels like safety offered just when it's needed most. These moments are where healing begins.

So as we pause to reflect on gratitude this season, I want to thank you—our partners, donors, advocates, and friends—for standing with us. Your belief in Turning Point fuels this vital work. Together, we continue to turn life's lessons into lasting blessings, ensuring that every survivor and every child we serve knows they are seen, valued, and never alone.

In Love and Light,

Mary Margaret Maule
